During the night, the elf girl had a high fever. There's a high possibility that she's fatigued and that the inflammation and infection from her wounds has spread to her organs. At this rate, there is no choice but to amputate her limbs...

STIFFENED

HAA...

HA

She was mumbling and breathing shallowly for a while, but as the medicine began to take effect, her breathing became calmer. As I was thinking about what to do next, the night had passed.

ZZ...

ZZZ...

The first thing to do is to prepare a simple antipyretic and antibacterial drink. Then I decocted wild elderberry and borage, and mixed it with powdered mana quartz. It was almost undrinkable, so I mixed up some rock salt and honey and poured it into her mouth.
